While there are still days left to wait until the third and final book in E. L. James' BDSM-themed trilogy, Freed: Fifty Shades Freed as Told by Christian, E! News has an exclusive excerpt from the upcoming installment —and trust us, it's steamy. As fans saw Dakota Johnson and Jamie Dornan play out to some degree in the famed trilogy's third movie adaptation, newlyweds Anastasia Steele and Christian Grey embark on a lavish European honeymoon, readers meeting them in the south of France. In James' written version of the events—this time from Christian's point of view—the pair is soaking up the sun in Monte Carlo when the newly married mogul decides he needs to cool off by taking a dip with his wife. But, let's just say things only get hotter from there. Don't take our word for it—read the excerpt below! Freed: Fifty Shades Freed as Told by Christian, out June 1, is available for preorder now here. (Warning: The excerpt contains explicit language)By midafternoon the temperature is scorching. I order some drinks from the hotel waitress, as I'm parched. Ana wakens and turns her attention to me. "Thirsty?" "Yes," she replies, sleepily. She's lovely. "I could watch you all day. Tired?" In the shade of the parasol, her face flushes. "I didn't get much sleep last night." "Me neither." I recall a vision from last night: Ana riding me hard. My body stirs. S--t. I need to cool down. Now. Standing, I make quick work of slipping out of my denim shorts. "Come for a swim with me." I hold out my hand, and Ana blinks, a little dazed. "Swim?" I ask again. When she doesn't answer, I scoop her into my arms. "I think you need a wake-up call." She squeals and giggles at once. "Christian! Put me down!" "Only in the sea, baby." Laughing, I carry her across the hellish hot sand, grateful to reach the cooler, damper shoreline. Ana wraps her arms around my neck, her eyes alight with amusement as I wade into the Mediterranean. This has woken her up. She's clinging to me like a limpet. "You wouldn't," she says, a little breathless. I can't help my grin. "Oh, Ana, baby, have you learned nothing in the short time we've known each other?" Leaning down, I kiss her and she grasps my head, her fingers running through my hair. Greedily, she kisses me back with a passion that catches me unawares and takes my breath away. Ana. I'm grateful I'm waist-deep in the water. "I know your game." I murmur against her lips, and slowly sink into the sea, kissing her once more. The cool water, her hot, wet mouth against mine, it's arousing. She's wrapped around me, warm and wet, cloaking me in her long, lovely limbs. This is heaven. I consume her, our passion building while my mind empties. It's just Ana, my beautiful girl, and me. In the sea.I want her. Here. Now. "I thought you wanted to swim," she whispers, when we stop for air. "You're very distracting." I tug her lower lip and suck. "And I'm not sure I want the good people of Monte Carlo to see my wife in the throes of passion." She grazes my jaw with her teeth. She wants more. "Ana," I warn, twisting her ponytail around my wrist. I gently tug so I have access to her throat. She tastes of salt water, coconut sunscreen, sweat, and, best of all, Ana. "Shall I take you in the sea?" "Yes." Her answer is a whisper that stokes my libido. F--k. Enough. This is getting out of hand. "Mrs. Grey, you're insatiable and so brazen. What sort of monster have I created?" "A monster fit for you. Would you have me any other way?" "I'll take you any way I can get you, you know that. But not right now. Not with an audience." I tilt my head to the shore. Ana glances at the sunbathers taking an intrusive interest in what we are doing. Enough, Grey. Grabbing her around her waist, I boost her into the air and she lands with a satisfying splash in the sea. When she surfaces, she's laughing and spluttering with feigned indignation. "Christian!" she cries, and skates her hand across the surface of the water, splashing me. I splash her right back, grinning because she looks so disappointed. Freed, by E.L. James. Photo: Sarabeth Pollock E.L. James is back with Freed, the book that explores the events depicted in Fifty Shades Darker from Christian Grey's perspective. At over 750 pages, it's a love letter to fans loaded with delightful details that were missing from the original tale. Freed takes fans on an insightful journey that takes a deep dive into the mind of Grey Enterprises Holdings' enigmatic CEO as he walks down the aisle with the love of his life.It's important to note that Freed, like Grey and Darker, are retellings of the stories originally featured in the Fifty Shades of Grey trilogy. They aren't new stories, but they're very different from the originals because the point of view shifts from Anastasia Steele to Christian Grey. The events are the same and some of the dialogue is identical, but the perspective shift is enough to give the stories a brand new and refreshing twist.In fact, I'd argue that Freed is better than its predecessor.The Fifty Shades Trilogy was a big hit and if they marked the end of Ana and Christian's story it would have been fine. However, telling the stories from Christian's perspective after years have passed, make the new trilogy stronger.Christian's perspective is clear and steady. He's older and more experienced than Ana, and he also knows what he wants. Hearing his thoughts and understanding things from his perspective turn the stories on their head – for the better. He might not have been openly vulnerable with Ana in the original trilogy but he can't hide his fears when the story is coming from his point of view.Freed is to Fifty Shades of Grey as Midnight Sun is to TwilightE.L. James isn't the only author to revisit and revamp her work. In 2020 Stephenie Meyer released Midnight Sun, a retelling of Twilight from vampire Edward Cullen's perspective. After 15 years, Meyers clearly worked out some of the issues that plagued the original story, tightening the writing and offering more depth so that Midnight Sun is a much better read than Twilight.For James, writing the trilogy from Christian's perspective allows her to explore his motivation. It also gives her a chance to "fix" things she might not have liked in her original story. When Fifty Shades of Grey debuted there was a lot of controversy about Christian's relationship with Ana, and Christian's perspective allows her to flesh out all of his past trauma that drives his actions.At his core, Christian is raw and vulnerable and terrified that he will lose the woman who means everything to him. He's seen the worst that life can offer while Ana is young and just starting out on the adventure called life. He's perpetually at odds with himself, but in Freed he finally starts to realize that through Ana's love he can find the salvation he needs to let go of the past and embrace the future.Fans of James' work will find many reasons to love Freed, but be warned that if you weren't into the original trilogy, Freed and its predecessors likely change your mind. Christian is still every bit the embattled Dominant, with his strong and often overbearing opinions. That's what draws some people in and pushes others away. Like everything in the world, it comes down to what you like and what you don't like. This book, however, is a love letter to fans who have waited a long time to read Christian's thoughts.It's hard to believe that Freed marks the end of an era for the Fifty Shades saga. With this final book, James has brought Christian and Ana's story to a fulfilling conclusion that will no doubt leave fans sated.
